

RHODE ISLAND COLLEGE

ENGLISH 326

AFRICAN AMERICAN LITERATURE

In this course, you will be introduced to a number of literary and critical texts that attempt to discuss and/ or define African-American literature. This introduction is, of course, only a way to begin to approach our readings of the texts and is not in any way meant to exclude or preclude any other directions of inquiry that might present themselves as time goes on. But such an inquiry necessarily begs us to consider what it means to (or what we individually mean when we...) talk about black or Black or "Black" or Afro-American or African-American literature. The success of the course is entirely dependent on each of us participating fully in the reading and discussion of these texts. It is not assumed that any of us will always speak from the space of authority and fact: interrogation and speculation are encouraged.

Texts:

Souls of Black Folk – WEB DuBois

Their Eyes Were Watching God - Zora Neale Hurston

Uncle Tom's Children - Richard Wright

Dutchman and The Slave – Leroi Jones (also known as: Amiri Baraka)

Middle Passage - Charles Johnson

The Black Poets - Dudley Randall

Sula - Toni Morrison

OBJECTIVES

- The student will demonstrate a familiarity with key concepts of the field (such as, “ethnicity,” “the Other,” “marginalization,” “race,” “hybridity,” “creolization,” etc.).
- The student will demonstrate in depth historical and cultural knowledge of Africans in the Americas].
- The student will acquire familiarity with some important works of African-American literature.
- The student will respond in writing to both artistic and cultural aspects of selected texts.
- The student will develop brainstorming and problem-solving techniques.
- The student will further develop analytical and critical writing skills.
- The student will work with a few primary non-print sources – visual art, media, film, music, folklore, etc.
- The student will demonstrate an understanding of secondary materials, including non-print (film, music, internet) and theoretical texts
- The student will demonstrate an interrelated awareness of cultural diversity in the U.S.
- The student will recognize the interaction of history, culture, and literature inherent in African American studies.
- The student will become aware of several themes that bridge the various elements of the course (e.g., education, childhood, family, sexuality, etc.).

Grading:

Short Papers and Two 6 – 7 page analytical papers on novels	40%
Midterm Test	20%
Participation, presentations	20%
Final Project	20%

More than 3 unexcused absences will adversely affect your grade.

Project I:

The Harlem Renaissance –

You will present on one important figure of the Harlem Renaissance – writer, dancer, artist, social leader, philosopher, etc. Your written evaluation of him / her is due September 23. You will discuss your figure in class on September 28.

Aug 31	Introduction to Course
Sept 2	Poems by Paul Laurence Dunbar; “The Wife of His Youth” (Chesnutt); Forethought and Chapter One, Souls of Black Folk
Sept 7	Labor Day
Sept 9	Chapters 2 – 5, 7
Sept 14	Chapters 10 - conclusion
Sept 16	“The New Negro” (Locke); “Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain” (Hughes); “The Negro-Art Hokum” (Schuyler); “Criteria of Negro Art” (DuBois); “How It Feels to Be Colored Me” (Hurston)
Sept 21	Critiques of Van Vechten; “The Caucasian Storms Harlem” (Fisher); “Looking for Zora” (Walker); Selected Poetry (Black Poets : 59 – 70; 78 – 101)
Sept 23	HARLEM RENAISSANCE PAPER DUE
Sept 28	Discuss Renaissance Figures
Sept 30	Their Eyes Were Watching God
Oct 5	Their Eyes Were Watching God
Oct 7	PAPER DUE;

	“Blueprint for Negro Writing” (Wright); Uncle Tom’s Children
Oct 12	Columbus Day
Oct 13	TAKE HOME MID TERM EXAM (NO CLASS)
Oct 14	Uncle Tom’s Children
Oct 19	Dutchman and The Slave
Oct 21	Dutchman and The Slave
Oct 26	“Black Is... Black Ain’t” (video)
Oct 28	Selected Poetry
Nov 2	“Playing in the Dark” (extract) (Morrison); Sula
Nov 4	Sula
Nov 9	Sula
Nov 11	Veteran’s Day
Nov 16	PAPER DUE ; Essays by Audre Lorde and bell hooks
Nov 18	“Space Traders”; Contemporary Matters
Nov 23	Contemporary Matters
Nov 25	Middle Passage
Nov 30	Middle Passage
Dec 2	Selected Poetry
Dec 7	Final Projects
Dec 9	Final Projects